Inside....

Loon Lake Dive/Cleanup/Adventure

It was a dark and dreary day. And wet. This was May 15, the date of the cleanup of Loon Lake. Just under 10 volunteers met for the trip up near Hale. The area had had its share of rain the previous day, and the road back into the camp was washed out. The brave and foolhardy convoy chose to ford the stream flowing where the road had been; it was this or hike a mile with gear.

Beach area

The vis in the lake wasn't great, even when the sun started coming out near the end. A few cinder blocks, an anchor, somebody's just-lost weight, and a beautiful rock were the few items found. Terry L had an underwater metal detector running, and he did pick up a coin. Anyone understand Norwegian?

Many steps; only access down the 1000' cliff

-and the final touch; end of the cleanup.

Lake Loon now has a cleaner swim area, thanks to the tireless efforts of SUE!
