Success; Club Picnic...

With the exception of the brat-fest, the annual SUE club picnic did take place last month at placid Otter Lake. Few people contacted Prez Cunningham, so the brats were scrubbed. However, it was great diving weather, and about 10 people did show up. The SCOOP editor brought his new underwater video camera to play with. Fun; but it was limited by a 65' cable. Although the weather was warm and sunny, water conditions didn't follow suit. The water near shore was exceptionally warm, which caused the divers a false sense of comfortable diving. The extra warm wx had accelerated weed growth, and the vis was poor. The sunken boat was really hard to see unless you were within a foot of it. Of course, once you're at the boat, you have to follow the rope out to the crib. It was a long trip. Knowing the bottom was just a couple feet below the rope was useless; it was too dark to see. Not to mention that once you descended below the 20' of the sunken boat, Otter Lake lets you experience it's icy bottom; whatever warmth you had in your suit to begin with is sapped. Your editor had some serious inner talks along the rope about the stupidity of self abuse...

Of course, any dive outing is better than the 6:00 news. We attracted the attention of a bunch of local youngsters, who were surprised to hear there was a sunken boat right below them. Their questions led to the inevitable; we let them try the equipment. It was worth it giving them bragging rights over their friends back in school.

There weren't enough members to follow up with a business meeting, but we did meet for the usual profound discussions. No quotes available...

Artifacts-

The AP ran a recent story about Harry Zych from Chicago. He discovered the wreckage of the USM Lady Elgin(sunk in 1860 with much loss of life ; big story,) north of Chicago in 1989. (cont'd next page)

Harry had a legal battle with Illinois over rights, and won. Today Harry has a number of artifacts he would like to contribute to a museum, and no museum is interested! Anyone have spare room in your garage?

More Otter Lake pics-

Here's some of the youngsters interested in our activities last month. The SCOOP apologizes for misplacing their names, and will attempt to correct this at a later date.

Dive Team News

The unit was called out on July 30 for a woman planning a jump off the Holland Bridge. Mike Reinig; grabbed her and pulled her back from the railing. On Aug 26 they got a call for an empty boat on the river. Then a report of a trailer in the water at Wickes park. Recovered both; later both found to have been stolen.. (courtesy dive team newsletter)
